Comments: Option B is the only way to continue to serve all types of recreation on public land. People use public land in all sorts of ways that have little impact on the environment, and snowmobiling is one of them. If public lands continue to be restricted more and more, the people that use the land might not appreciate the public lands as much. Recreation means so much to so many people, and it is not fair to selectively allow certain groups to use public lands while cutting others off from it solely on the grounds of disallowing motorized vehicles.
