Comments: Good morning,

I was born and raised in Florida, met my husband when I was 21 who was born and raised in Alaska and moved up with him within 6 months. I fell in love with this state in the first day. Since then we have been a active couple with 2 daughters. The first place he taught me how to ride a snowmachine was in the chugach national forests at Turnagain. Since then i fell in love with riding. We spend so much money into the sport and the state it's not funny. We go riding almost every weekend if my husbands not serving for the United States Air Force. We want are daughters to be able to ride the same areas that we have got to ride for as long as my husband can remember. Snowmachines don't destroy the ground like other motor sports do. And to take away land for the people who use it the most is unfair and criminal. The skiers don't spend money to keep this land as good as they found it. They also don't hold a clean up every year like the snowmachiners do. We would love for it to stay the way that it is now but if it has to change we want alternative plan b or c. Thanks and have a American day.
