Comments: To whom it may concern,

I have lived in Alaska since 2001 with a short 3 year period back in the early 90's as my dad served in the USAF. My parents fell in love with this state when I was very young while visiting family and did everything they could to get orders from the Air Force to here. The thing they loved the most was being able to just get out of the house and go pretty much anywhere. We recreate anywhere from Homer all the way to Fairbanks like a lot of other people in this state, and I would like to voice my opinion the this land management revision. If you ask me none of these revisions are any good but since one must be chosen then I believe "B" would be it. I personally don't think any of the land should be closed down to anyone no matter if they are hiking, skiing, or riding snowmachines. If anything should be done I believe more should be opened up for access for both motorized and non-motorized to BOTH use, share, and enjoy our great state and what it has to offer together. I'd like to thank you for taking the time to read this and hope the right decision of opening more land for everyone to get out and enjoy is made.

Regards,

Deryck Harris
