Comments: Hello,

I was excited to see the news of the proposed mountain bike expansion at Copper. I'm having a 2nd mountain biking life now that my kids are old enough to go with me.

I was also happy to see e-bikes included since I recently bought a couple of those to add to the stable. Reading closer, though, that may be a bad thing. If I want to ride single track on my class 1 e-bike, it appears as though I'll be relegated to 1/14th of the new sections. Better than nothing, but I'd love you to reconsider.

I ride a dirt bike, non-electric mountain bike, and now an e-bike. The e-bike really is nothing more than my non-e hardtail being peddled by my in my 20's instead of 50's. It makes no more noise, no more trail damage, and no more danger than the same non-e version Specialized Stumpjumper. In fact, you can go downhill faster on a downhill bike.

Just thought I'd toss that out there. I'd love to bring the family out there with our new found e-bike hobby! :- ) (and have more than one singletrack to ride).

Thanks for listening!
