Comments: To Whom it May Concern,

I support keeping both the Lost River Range (including Mount Borah) and the North Slope of the Pioneers in the plan as recommended wilderness areas.

These two places are some of the most rugged, undeveloped, untouched landscapes that I've had the honor of visiting in central Idaho. They deserve the gold standard of protection that wilderness designation provides.

On recent trips into the Pioneers and the Lost Rivers I have seen almost no sign of human impact. They truly are untrammeled. I enjoyed my solitude in the wilderness as I explored these regions this past spring and summer-sharing the experience with the local, native flora and fauna.

Thank you for all that you do to protect these incredible places.

All my best,

Emily
