Comments: I disagree with closing any more of the Salmon-Challis national forest for wilderness. As an outdoors woman who hunts, fishes, and horseback rides the accessibility will make it so the area is unusable for most people. The current accessibility is what makes this region so great.

As said by Gifford Pinchot, first Chief of the Forest Service, National Forest land is managed, "to provide the greatest amount of good for the greatest amount of people in the long run."

If that is what the national forest is for why on earth would we close off and ruin accessibility for the vast majority of people who utilize the Salmon-Challis National forest?

It seems as though the priorities of this evaluation are not being driven as the intent of the national forest was originally intended to do.
