Comments: Please consider continuing public access and vehicular access to the King Mountain hang glider and paraglide launch site and road up King Mountain at Moore Idaho at the Southern end of the Salmon-Challis Wilderness Area. This small area has been public access for decades, and is one of the best and easily accessed places for serious hang gliding in the whole country.

I enjoy hiking everywhere from public parks to extremely remote wild areas, and to be within sight and earshot of hang gliders and paragliders does not, and will not, negatively affect my experience. I suspect the impact on wildlife of this activity is minimal. The acreage required to maintain this access is surely minuscule compared to the total in the proposal.

Thank you for your consideration, and thank you for your service to the public, and for your stewardship of the land and resources and wildlife of our public land.
