Comments: The Salmon-Challis National Forest is the largest forest in the state, and contains some of its wildest remaining unroaded areas. These areas have been managed as wilderness for years, preserving their exceptional wilderness characteristics. I support permanently protecting them as wilderness for our future.

As a mountain climber and hiker, I look forward to one day exploring the Pioneers and the Borah Peak area. I hope these areas and others like them are kept in wilderness protection. I really appreciate experiencing places with wilderness character and primitive recreation opportunities. I also like knowing that wilderness areas are protected, so that native animals, birds, and plants can carry on unbothered.

Wilderness areas are our real national gems. I dwell in the very eastern tip of Idaho and am truly appreciative of all our wild places here. I strongly support as much wilderness designation as possible.
