Comments: We do not need more roads. North America is already full of traffic; wildlife, humans and pets need more space where they can enjoy peace and safety. Even simple trails that make human visiting on foot easier can be disturbing, and motor vehicle would be even worse. Therefore, I believe Custer Gallatin forest should be left intact, with no new or renewed pathways for humans, and motor vehicles, hunting and other unnatural activities should be prohibited. Reducing numbers of humans and livestock would also be beneficial.
