Comments: As a visitor to the Beartooth Mountains, I particularly value the presence of the grizzly bears, as well as the quiet hikes that I can take with no fear of being forced off the trail by out-of-control mountain bikers.

Mountain bikes have no right to be on wilderness trails. Mountain bikers can do as all other people who respect the wilderness: walk.

Allowing mountain bikes on trails disturbs wildlife for miles in either side of said trail. Let the wilderness remain undisturbed.

Please adopt option D.
