Comments: There are so many magical places in the Custer Gallatin National Forrest. Some of these places I have only just discovered as my husband and I have tried to encourage our young twin boys to get out and explore the public lands that belong to all of us. Having young children puts the protection of these wild places into a new perspective. I want to believe that these places will be around for my kids to explore and their kids to explore and so on. Not only do these areas provide stunning natural beauty, they also offer world class recreation to those who choose to adventure into their depths. I support the Montana Wilderness and their recommendations for managing these lands.
