Comments: Dear Forest Service,

As a horseback rider I truly enjoy this area of national forest. Collins Cove is one of my favorite places to camp during riding season. As I know you all have done some logging in the area in the past some areas left our trail system a disaster zone closing sections of popular trails, yet in other areas the trails were put back better than before or rerouted. If you all willing to work with us on putting the trails that will be affected back in working order then I think logging the areas would be fine as it will allow new growth and vegetation. If it is not in the plan to replace or reroute the affected trails then I think logging would be devastating to the horseback riding community. I hope you all will take into consideration that this section of national forest is mainly used by horseback riders, lots of whom travel over an hour to stay at either your campgrounds or other local campgrounds which in return benifits you all and the local economy. Hope you all will take this into consideration, thanks for allowing us to have an impute.
