Comments: I would like to implore that no parts of the Daniel Boone forest be logged. It should be protected in its entirety, in my opinion. If logging is to be done, much to everyone's dismay, I at least hope it is done in an ecologically ethical way, providing hope for new trees to emerge, disturbing as little habitat as possible, and leaving old growth trees, as they are a natural wonder and historical relic. The surrounding communities, the animals, the water table, and ultimately the planet, relies on this area being protected to ensure habitat, health, beauty, and recreation. Our children will not know that this world was ever beautiful to start with, at the rate that profiting corporate interest has destroyed and is destroying our planet and our chances of survival. Half of the world doesn't have access to clean water and that number is constantly rising. Appalachia has been ravaged by coal mining, fracking, logging, off-shoring all the jobs, and displacing whole cities via gentrification. It is time to realize that this is enough. It is too much. Huge parts of the world are on fire everyday, while hurricanes ravage the south east as we speak. The ocean will soon be uninhabitable. Climate change is going to be the reason our children die. Stop destroying the earth please.
