Comments: I've lived in Arizona close to a half century, the number of trails that have been closed in that time is truly disturbing. They estimated 250 people move to Arizona each day yet all these people visiting the outdoors will be concentrated into a smaller areas. This will strain the resources and create issues with overcrowding. I love to hunt, drive my Jeep and enduro bike in the outdoors. I'm older, had 5 knee surgeries and can no longer get around like when I was young. I feel the constant closing of public forest access roads is discrimination against those With physical limitations, and can't walk into these areas.
