Data Submitted (UTC 11): 10/19/2019 3:04:30 AM
First name: John
Last name: Summers
Organization:
Title:
Comments: I love camping up at Meadow Park, but every summer my campsite is overrun by cows and they leave crap all over the ground. Isn't there some rule that says that National Recreation Areas should give priority to camping (or other recreation activities) over cattle grazing? I recommend that you make sure the National Recreation Area is managed in a way that gives priority to camping and recreating over cattle grazing.

I know that there are still a few people who graze cattle for a living, but they can graze them elsewhere on the mountain and not in the recreation area.

I think your forest plan should emphasize the need to give priority to recreation activities within the recreation area, and that activities that impact recreation (such as cattle grazing) should be discontinued.