Comments: What is wrong with the executive branch of our government?

I stand in opposition to building new roads in the Alaskan national forests. Alternative 1, preventing new roads in our national forests, is the alternative I support, and none of the others are sensible.

We do not need new roads or new logging in our national forests. These are national treasures, not resources to be exploited by the most venal and destructive of our citizens. These forests are parts of our critical infrastructure that are mitigating the effects of climate change. We don't need new sources for toilet paper. Don't build these roads.
