Comments: I am writing as a former resident of Southeast Alaska and as a professor of ethics. I strongly urge you to select the "no action" option, which would protect the Tongass National Forest from additional logging incursion. I know this forest deeply and well from years spent hiking, boating, camping, and fishing there. Its beauty attracts over a million tourists each year. It is unethical to rob so many year-round residents and tourists of the experience of this forest in favor of the interests of a much smaller number of people who would be enriched by the opportunity to cut down and sell its trees.
