Comments: You need to leave the Tongass untouched and roadless. It supports a balanced ecosystem that works and is clean. It supports wild salmon runs which in turn support all the life that exists there and us. We must learn to leave places alone that work as whole systems. There are very few remaining and we must respect them. They support our own lives. I like clean air and healthy clean food and have clean water to drink. We cannot live without these systems in place and these life support systems all depend on leaving ecosystems intact and in place and not polluting them or cutting them down or destroying them through our greed and arrogant ignorance. They don't work any more once we even put in a road because a road leads to all kind of bad behavior on our part that destroys what is there which we need as it is, not decimated. Technology cannot make any of these systems whole or work effectively again once we have poisoned, polluted or clearcut them. Our greed and arrogance has to stop and you need to stop it here. NO ROADS IN THE TONGASS OR THE CHUGACH. Keep these forests roadless. Also keep the arctic roadless and keep as much of Alaska roadless as possible. Alaska is our last hope for a clean and healthy planet without which none of us will be able to live. Think about it and look at history. We are not good global citizens. We are selfish and destroy everywhere we go. The Middle East is a shining example of ecosystems gone bad. It is time to not go into places and tear them up. We need to keep the remaining ecosystems intact of which the Tongass is one. There aren't many left anywhere on this earth anymore. i used to work in the Tongass, commercial fishing for salmon, and I learned what the rest of the US and Canada had lost by seeing what was in SE ALaska. It is precious. Keep it untouched. It no longer exists in Canada or the West coast of the US.
