Comments: The idea that we would in any way affect or change this beautiful environment is absolutely devastating. As someone who has visited Alaska and been stunned by its natural beauty and pristine areas, I am total against it being changed in any way. As one writer put it recently "given the scope of habitat loss around the world, we're lucky we still have a place like this to save." As Audubon Alaska puts it, "the Tongass National Forest provides us with the greatest opportunity in the nation, if not the world, for protecting temperate rainforest at the ecosystem scale." Please do not touch this exquisite - and sadly, now rare - natural beauty and ecosystem. Thank you, Cynthia
