Comments: I have visited Alaska many times and am always in awe of the pristine nature of its environment. And I come from Montana--a place that would be a model for the rest of the lower 48. We have cut, mined, fenced, developed everywhere, including here in my home state. Can we leave some places alone so that we remember what we had? Is it worth a few years of profits to cut 800 year old trees? Keep the Tongass roadless. Future generations will thank you.
