Comments: Comments on Alaska Roadless Rule Project

I strongly support Alternative 1, where the Tongass National Forest is kept intact and the Alaska Roadless Road Rule take no action. We live in times where the climate crisis is taking a toll on our ecosystems, making us and the biodiversity more vulnerable and less resilient to adapt though changes. Alaska is a valuable wilderness and very important for many species survival, the focus on extracting timber as a way of economic growth its only 1% of the state's Jobs. The focus should be in economic growth of nature tourism and fisheries that represents over 25%. Promoting the conservation of this important area will ensure not only a most important forest ally in carbon sequestration, but another opprotunities of economic growth less invasive and perjudicial than timber cutting.
