Comments: Dear Sir or Ma'am, The Tongass National Forest is the largest intact old-growth temperate rainforest left in the world. To follow on Trump's push to open up over half the area to logging will be detrimental to the forest's ecology and economy. Not only will it affect the annual salmon run that gave the place its famous name of "Salmon Forest" but it's economically illogical as over $600 million was lost in logging operation in a recent report. Making this new move the definition of unsustainable. Please do reconsider this move and uphold the roadless rule for generations to come. Thank you.
