Comments: There are few good reasons to allow for this activity in the Tongass NF. The economic value of salmon, recreation and carbon sequestration provided by unlogged, roadless forest surpasses the long-term value of constructing roads and extracting timber and mineral resources. The Forest Service has a responsibility to manage in a sustainable fashion for multiple uses. Road construction for resource extraction are only being driven by political pressure that would make money for a few people at the expense of the public good. This forest belongs to the people of the United States of America, not to a few special interests.
