Comments: According to the 2013 study Use of historical logging patterns to identify disproportionately logged ecosystems within temperate rainforests of southeastern Alaska by Albert DM and Schoen JW of the Nature Conservancy in Juneau, AK 66% of the large-tree old-growth forest of Tongass has already been logged. I stand with those who uphold the Roadless Rule and conserve key areas of the Tongass, including the highest quality salmon-producing watersheds within the Tongass 77.
