Comments: I understand that this proposed rule change was instigated by the Alaskan state government to return decision making authority to the local Forest Service offices. While I am generally in favor of local control, I do not believe the Roadless rule prevents local Alaskans from the decision making process for the use of the Tongass National Forest.

I want to uphold the Roadless Rule and conserve key areas of the Tongass, including the highest quality salmon-producing watersheds within the Tongass. People throughout Alaska and the rest of the country depend on the productive rivers and wild fish of the Tongass for food, jobs, and recreation.
