

Data Submitted (UTC 11): 10/20/2019 8:00:00 AM

First name: Michael

Last name: Williams

Organization:

Title:

Comments: Tongass National Forest cannot be made exempt of the Roadless Act. Since it is national land, strong reason and fact must be shown to the American people that there is a greater benefit to the people to do this than to leave it in its current condition. The lumber industry has sufficient land to work from and if not, then impartial studies must be undertaken to show the need for more land. As for the Alaskan people, it would be better that our nation support the region with grants to promote and develop tourism and less invasive development that would benefit a greater range of the public. Don't make this change to the standing law of the land. The people don't want it or need it.

[Position]

[Position]