Comments: As a current teenager in the United States, I hope that my future and the futures of the rest of the youth of America are considered in choosing whether to exempt the Tongass National Forest from the Roadless Rules. The Tongass National Forest has existed for over a century, and exempting it from it's current protection would mean that us youth as the future of this country would not be able to benefit from the area as the generations before us were able to. Should this protection be removed, the effects of logging or road construction in this area would cause drastic problems in the environment, and would be very hard to reverse. Again, in considering this action, please think of the future effects...
