Comments: To the Forest Service,

Since most of you are scientists I am sure you know how long it took for the Tongass National Forest to become its pristine, glorious self. To allow logging and destruction of this national treasure would be beyond heretical.

The greatest thing our adult generation can do for our children and grandchildren and those who will follow is to preserve this priceless forest for coming generations. And not only for posterity but for the ecological value that forests have on the environment.

It is necessary for us to view the value of the Tongass as more than monetary. It is a priceless asset! The species depending on the Tongass eco system are needed to be protected in their habitat.

I pray you will look at the big picture when making decisions on the assets of all Americans. And the Tongass Forest is one of our most valuable.

Sincerely,

Elizabeth Gehlen Bruber
