Comments: I just wanted to simply voice my opinion on the matter the potential logging of the Tongass National Forest in Alaska. I think I speak for countless others for when I say that logging such a place like the Tongass is repulsive. The US forest service and other similar organizations should do everything in their power to preserve nature but allowing logging in the Tongass or any other of this nations national forests goes against that. Most places have already lost any remaining old growth forest to logging and now the largest example of old growth temperate rainforest is in jeopardy. Profiting of the destruction of entire ecosystems is disgusting. The US forest service is going against their very purpose if they allow the logging of the Tongass to happen.
