

Data Submitted (UTC 11): 10/29/2019 8:00:00 AM

First name: Yolinde

Last name: Hodde

Organization:

Title:

Comments: To whom it may concern,

Our natural resources globally are finite, and irreplaceable. The well-being of our species is dependent on the health of our eco-system, and any proposal to deplete or destroy that eco-system in any proportion is madness and self-sabotaging.

If reason alone is not enough to convince those who wish to destroy precious forest and waterways, then consider the longterm financial impact of these resources. The financial gain of harvesting natural resources in an unsustainable way provides only a small and singular profit. If however these area are left to continue providing clean air, water, and a functional habitat to support thousands of species including our own, the benefits are immeasurable.

Do not let our remaining natural resources be pillaged for short term profit.

[Position]

[Position]