

Data Submitted (UTC 11): 10/25/2019 8:00:00 AM

First name: Patricia

Last name: Turk

Organization:

Title:

Comments: The Forest Service loses $30,000,000 each year it logs in the Tongass National Forest. How does it make sense to increase logging and losing more money? Most of the forest is low-quality timber, good for mostly nothing. One thing the forest is good for is producing oxygen, habitat for animals, and salmon streams that help keep the population up. This proposal makes absolutely no sense at all, it seems to be based on nothing but a way to ruin the environment and hatred of the Roadless Rule and its author, President Obama. I urge you to throw this idea into the garbage, the same way Erdogan is said to have thrown Trump's letter telling him not to be a bad guy. This president's unswaying devotion to canceling every good thing that President Obama did because Trump's ego can't stand the fact that he will never, in any manner or way, come anywhere near being the president, the father, the husband and the MAN that President Obama is and always will be. His sick fascination with destroying the legacy of one of the best presidents this country has ever had is dragging our country down and ruining every good thing the United States stands for!

[Position]