Comments: To whom it may concern,

I am very pleased to hear people are taking an effort in getting more public land accessible to public land owners. However, when these parcels are already accessible, why make a land swap when it seems to be benefiting the private land owner more than the public? I understand working with private land owners plays a vital role, but from the research I've done it seems as though we, public land owners, are trading better land than we are receiving. I am not in favor of trading land we already have access to for less favorable habitat rich land for something less.

Please reconsider and do not do this land trade!
