

Data Submitted (UTC 11): 11/14/2019 9:00:00 AM

First name: Tamara

Last name: Austin

Organization:

Title:

Comments: AK Roadless Rule Alternatives

To the Forest Service,

We have destroyed enough of our natural, wild in the United States. Every effort should be made to keep the Tongass National Forest as wild and as natural as possible. Allowing additional roads to be built for the purpose of allowing timber companies and other industries increased access to Tongass and in turn other National Forests only defeats the purpose for which these areas were created. There will little to no benefit for the majority of the American people. Those want these changes only desire for their own benefits.

There are some things that no individual state should have control. Environmental degradation does not stay within the boundaries of a single state or country. While the Tongass lies within the boundaries of Alaska, it does not solely belong to Alaskans and definitely does not belong to the timber industry. Tongass belong to all of Americans. Please don't ruin it before I get a chance to see it.

Thank you,

Tamara Austin

Dix, IL 62830

[Position]

Sent from Mail for Windows 10