Comments: The Tongass National Forest should NOT be exempted from the 2001 Roadless Rule. This area, along with the rest of our precious "wild" areas should be preserved for future generations (of both humans and more-than-humans). Industry rights should not be valued over their rights. As a country we need to start preserving our wilderness and restoring what has been lost. Opening the forest to try to help a struggling industry survive is short-sighted. It continues to deny our current climate situation, and pass the buck to future generations. It is both irresponsible, and immoral.
