Comments: The Tongass National Forest is the nation's largest national forest, the second being the Chugah with less than half the amount of land covered then the Tongass is covering with 6.9 million compared to the Tongass having 17 million The Roadless Rule, established two decades ago, protects important fish and wildlife habitat on federal lands, protects drinking water, and protects recreation and business opportunities, all of which are crucial to Alaska's communities and economy. Removing the rule all of this could be torn away from us in just a few years. Removing the roadless rule not only goes against both conservation and preservation it is almost unpatriotic to destroy our own landmark for the entire future of americans. Alternative 1 is the best choice not only for our needs but for the needs of all future americans.

Sincerely, Rory Billmeyer
