Comments: My name is Lucy Mead and I live in Eugene, Oregon.

Clearcutting is not acceptable in this day and age! It's a terribly destructive way to handle the precious resources of our forests. Surely we can find ways to save our national forests such as Tongass, and also log intelligently elsewhere -- we cannot continue to blindly gobble up our world with our money-dominated, greedy, thoughtless attitudes toward the nature around us that makes our very lives possible. eek! Leave the Tongass National Forest alone, PLEASE! We cannot afford to lose this valuable asset to wasteful silliness.

I am writing to express strong opposition to efforts to roll back the Roadless Area Conservation Rule (Roadless Rule) in Alaska or elsewhere. The Roadless Rule was implemented with unprecedented public support to protect some of our nation's most pristine public lands, including large parts of the Tongass National Forest. You must choose the No Action alternative. Any other choice would ignore overwhelming public support and harm Alaskans, including Alaska Natives, and taxpayers across the nation.

In Southeast Alaska, tourism accounts for 28% of employment and generates an annual $1 billion in economic benefit, making it far more of an economic driver than the timber industry, which is less than 1% of the regional economy.

Any choice but the No Action alternative would also put wildlife and critical habitat at risk, threaten access to clean water, and be a step in the wrong direction on climate change jeopardizing Alaskans at a time when the state already faces severe challenges related to rising temperatures. I urge you not to abandon the Roadless Rule in Alaska and instead to put the public interest above corporate profits by choosing to keep the rule in place unchanged.

Thank you for considering my comments.

Regards, Lucy Mead
