Comments: Keep 'Roadless Rule' Protections for the Tongass National Forest

Dear U.S. Forest Service,

I strongly oppose the Forest Service's plan to eliminate "Roadless Rule" protections for the Tongass National Forest and urge you to select the "no action" alternative instead.

As you know the Tongass is America's wildest remaining national forest, with more than 9 million acres of roadless areas. How much more natural forest do we need to lose before the lungs of our planet are gone? Forest fires, insects, disease, and bad forestry practices are decimating our last natural places. As a concerned Canadian I know there are no borders with the climate! Please select the [ldquo]no action [ldquo] alternative instead!

Sincerely,

Els Kowbel
