

Data Submitted (UTC 11): 10/24/2019 5:18:17 PM

First name: Taba

Last name: Luedtke-Phillips

Organization:

Title:

Comments: Many objections

As a human being who loves nature and spends all the time I can experiencing it, and also as a student who CAN NOT AFFORD to eat out, or buy a coffee EVEN ONCE a month (let alone a day), this seems like a terrible idea. Fees are already high for many other areas and it's often I have a friend or two go out for a hike or overnight and invite me and I just can't because of the fees involved. This seriously becomes a human rights access issue and an extreme issue of taxing the poor (which there are many more of than anyone else). The money spent on planning these things is better spent developing a new infrastructure that doesn't doesn't penalize people under or near the poverty line.

I don't speak only for myself, I am surrounded by many who hold the same or very similar opinions. I talked to nearly 40 people in just the last day who hardily agreed with me, and I know (based on my circles of friends and acquaintances) that hundreds more do, and those are just people I know; I'm sure many thousands object as well.