Greetings.

I suspect many folks hiking in these areas made plans to do so many months prior. With that in mind I would suggest a 70% to 30% ratio, with those who planned ahead getting 70% of the passes, and those hiking spur of the moment getting the remaining passes.

I would suggest a refund policy similar to that used by some other trip related opportunities. If cancellation is made prior to 90 days out, full refund. Cancel 30 to 90 days out, 50% refund. Cancel less than 30 days out, no refund.

I total agree with the Limited Entry System idea. Visitors need to plan accordingly, and if they cancel, and leave other visitors with less time to plan accordingly, then it should cost them something.

Sincerely.
