Comments: Fees....

I am so glad that after 35 years in the wilderness, you have finally decided to try to control use. Hopefully you will put most of the fee revenue into restoration, and get rid of campfires all together, I am really tired of ground fires caused by people not bothering to put out the fire pit.

As far as fees go, I think people who are on fixed incomes (seniors, myself included) should catch some sort of break on the fee schedule, and low income residents also, many of whom come to the wilderness for family vacations, now it becomes a budgetary item. No one seems to have thought of that. I have thought in the past that there plenty of regulations on wilderness behavior, just needed someone to actually enforce them, I am not holding out for any of that though, seems like this is just a way to generate more revenue to build more fancy ranger stations, full of B.S. and stuffed animals.
