Dear Forest Service

I grew up exploring central Oregon. My dad took us camping because it is what we could afford. I remember thinking it was what everyone does. As a 33 year old adult with two kids I look back and realize how lucky I was. Spending that time in Oregon's wilderness has shaped me forever. I know a lot about the insects and plant life of our great state.

Charging people to access what is our freedom will restrict future generations from having what I enjoyed. It would dissolve further the freedom I was taught we Americans enjoy. So to be blunt, it's un-American and against the wishes of our founding fathers.

Do not charge our Citizens to explore what is all of ours.
