

Data Submitted (UTC 11): 11/18/2019 6:08:28 PM

First name: Neil

Last name: Gleichman

Organization:

Title:

Comments: Central Cascades Wilderness Project

Neil Gleichman

P O Box 264

Driggs, ID 83422

November 18, 2019

Dear Willamette National Forest,

I am concerned by a recent proposal to hyper-manage forests in Central Oregon.

Recreation within Deschutes and Willamette National Forests' Wilderness areas has a positive impact on local Oregon communities. Many citizens choose to reside in places like Bend for the accompanying quality of life and the health benefits of outdoor recreation, including climbing, hiking, backcountry skiing, trail running, and other human-powered Wilderness-based activities.

Burdensome and limited-entry permit systems could have an unintended economic impact on rural communities, local businesses, and the greater Oregon tourism economy. Recreation within Deschutes and Willamette National Forests' Wilderness areas has a positive impact on local Oregon communities. Many citizens choose to reside in places like Bend for the accompanying quality of life and the health benefits of outdoor recreation, including climbing, hiking, backcountry skiing, trail running, and other human-powered Wilderness-based activities.

A portion of permits should be held for walk-up, first come first serve availability to allow climbers to attempt summits during good weather windows, which decreases potential weather-related accidents and the chances of getting lost, both of which result in increased search and rescue missions within Wilderness areas.

I hope you consider the ordinary Forest user in the decision-making process.

Sincerely,

Neil Gleichman