Dear Willamette National Forest,

Recreation within Deschutes and Willamette National Forests' Wilderness areas has a positive impact on local Oregon communities. Many citizens choose to reside in places like Bend for the accompanying quality of life and the health benefits of outdoor recreation, including climbing, hiking, backcountry skiing, trail running, and other human-powered Wilderness-based activities. I agree with the new quota based system if it is lenient enough to allow climbing with restriction of the wear and waist that it noted in the area. The Forest Service should implement other management tools along with implementing limited-entry day-use permits.

Sincerely,

Mike Zyzda
