Comments: To Whom it may Concern,

Please do not exempt the Tongass National Forest from the Roadless rules. Climate change is already happening and any logging done in this forest would release more carbon into an atmosphere that is already too hot. The heating up of the Arctic is already a severe problem affecting sea level rise and extreme weather events all around the world. In Addition, The Tongass National Forest is the place where 40 percent of West Coast salmon breed. And it is a place where our indigenous population have utilized in sustainable ways.

Please do not sacrifice the long term health of the planet for a short term economic gain for a few.

As a grandmother, I have a real concern for the world we are leaving the next generations.

Please think about this responsibility when you make your decision.

Thank you.
