Comments: I am writing to urge protection of the Tongass National Forest and for the Forest service to leave the roadless rule in place. Several decades ago, I co-authored a book called "The Disappearing Russian Forest" and became aware of the high price paid by society when it undervalues original forest lands. It is very short-sighted to leave this resource vulnerable at a time when so much land in the U.S. has already been deforested and when logging cannot be justified by the demand in the market.
