Comments: Dear Forest Service Officials,

Please keep the roadless area rule in place in all our National Forests, but especially in the Tongass National Forest in Alaska. This forest really deserves a National Wilderness designation. I believe in protecting old growth trees wherever they are still living. These forests and trees are irreplaceable and even more important as carbon sinks needed to offset climate change. Please take this larger context into account, not just forest industry profits. These forests belong to all of us, and our children and their children.

Sincerely,

F.B.
