Comments: Fee

No on the fee, it will just discourage low income users. Suggestions: Rangers are paid too much, leave the forest the forest, it does not have to be pristine, no need for flush toilets and showers except at campgrounds, severe fines for those destroying property, charge for rescues, stop favoritism by employees to other employees, (don't tell me this does happen, it happened to me, a ranger put his friend ahead of me concerning a highly used area) forestry buildings do not have to be mansions. In other words cut back on the enormous costs of managing the forest. Attended a seminar on whale watching once and a forest ranger was there on company time, she bragged about it. Over use can be controlled by making available information on peak use times and signing in and out times.
