

Data Submitted (UTC 11): 12/7/2019 9:00:00 AM

First name: Bryce

Last name: Origer

Organization:

Title:

Comments: I would like to comment on this revision because I consider myself a modern day explorer in an era that nearly everything has been touched by humans. Nothing kills a beautiful forest like a clear cut scar running across the landscape. I understand the need for economy, but the ecotourism and other ecosystem services that that national forest provide are priceless. That place is one of the last wild places in the United States of America and it needs to be conserved for the future generations to come so that they are able to experience nature and see all of the animals and plants that we can luckily see today. Every time we level an ecosystem it never grows back the same, as hard as we try to restore it, we are not nature and cannot make it exactly like it was before with millions of years of processes to get where it is now.

--

Bryce Origer

Americorps Member @ Iowa Lakeside Laboratory

There is no passion to be found playing small - in settling for a life that is less than the one you are capable of living. -Nelson Mandela

[Position]