Comments: Dear Decision-Makers.

I live in Washington state, but the decision to gut the roadless rule in Alaska's Tongass National Forest affects me, as much as it affects those in Alaska. I am appalled that gutting the roadless rule in the Tongass National Forest is even being considered.

It would be short sighted and foolish to log the Tongass National Forest for many reasons, not least of which are how this ridiculous policy would affect tourism and climate change - we need to plant more trees, not cut down the ones that are here.

Remember, this is a NATIONAL forest - you are not making a decision in a vacuum.

Please, do not continue down this path. Keep the roadless rules as they are in the Tongass National Forest.

Thank you,

Kara Pomeroy
