Comments: I strongly oppose the proposed exemption of the Roadless Rule in the Tongass. This incredibly sensitive and delicate ecosystem would be irreparably damaged and the amazing creatures it supports would not survive it. Salmon are the backbone of the temperate rainforest and, with increased logging, pristine salmon habitat would become even more rare. Without the salmon, no bears. Without the salmon, fewer healthy trees. No salmon, no eagles. No salmon, no life.

Please keep the Tongass roadless. Six years wandering its expanse shaped who I am today. Please let the wilderness be there to shape future generations.
